Note: Maclean says that in his 1615 will Richard refers to his cousin George. Unfortunately our copy of the will is illegible. On the other hand, son John and George both refer to one other as cousin, and this makes more sense to me - and is also legible!

NOTE ON THIS LYNAM OUTLINE:

In no way does this outline aim to be comprehensive.

It is an attempt to interpret a number of sources, firstly "The Parochial and Family History of the Deanery of Trigg Minor Vol. 2" by Sir John Maclean 1876, and secondly "The Visitation of Cornwall 1620" ed. J.L. Vivian 1874. Then we have looked at a considerable number of 17th century wills, which do help compensate for the total lack of Endellion parish records for much of the period we are looking at.

George LYNAM's will of 1647 is full of references to his cousins; but it would appear that sometimes the term is used to denote kinsman, where the cousins may not be of the same generation - what we might call cousins-first-removed.

Occasionally Maclean would seem to be definitely mistaken. This then makes one less confident of other information On the other hand he is generally very thorough and one can only marvel at the sheer quantity of material he must have worked through.

The LYNAM family would seem to have been very settled around St Kew and even when some branches move away, to St Minver or St Endellion or St Teath etc, the links with St Kew remain strong. George LYNAM's 1647 will, for example, leaves money to the parishes of Endellion, St Kew, St Teath & Bodmin.

George's will does not mention the ROWE family.
George does refer to his son-in-law John FOOTE and John FOOTE's wife Margaret, also their children, well provided for.
Marjory in her will does not mention the FOOTE family.
She does though mention her daughter Joan ROWE and her ROWE grandchildren, one of whom, Abraham, is left a share of Marjory's orchard which is called FOOTE Orchard.

Interestingly, in his account of the early sufferings of the Quakers in Endellion Digory Hockin talks of how kindly received they were by Joan ROWE, and how Abraham and her daughter Melior 'were convinced' of the justness of the cause. Richard BILLING, mentioned immediately right, was also from a staunchly Quaker family in Endellion, while from the St Breward / St Tudy branch of the family came Loveday BILLING, who would become known as the Quaker Saint.

The PRDEAUX line can be traced back many generations.
Some of the other families from whom Charity PRIDEAUX is descended are set out in another outline called the 1066 to Restoration Outline.
